Now With F.M.L.

Millions saw the recent movie "Give 'Em Hell, Harry!" on network television January 20, the evening of the Carter Inauguration.

We were among a premier viewership in Temple about 16 months ago which saw the movie. The following was 116's comments in The Herald of Sept. 25, 1976:

NOT FOR SALE

Missouri produced at least two famous outspoken men in the past century. And actor James Whitmore characterizes one as the late President Harry S. Truman in "Give 'Em Hell, Harry."

The movie opened Wednesday throughout the country, but a premiere showing in Temple Tuesday suggests Whitmore's Truman is going to be a testy delight for millions of viewers.

It is in the format of a television special of a one-man show about Samuel Clements or Mark Twain so popular a few years ago.

Truman's language and mannerisms lend themselves to Whitmore's recreation, filmed before a live audience. At times, the applause from the screen audience and the theater audience is indistinguishable.

A good deal of the material came from Truman's lengthy interviews with Merle Miller which became "Plain Speaking," a best seller during 1974.

That Truman was decisive is established early on in the film. He calls his wife "Boss" but tells the audience how he gets out of chores by doing them on Sunday in conflict with traditional observation of the Sabbath.

At times, Truman sounds like anything but a religious man, which he apparently was. He was also a drinking man and one of the boys, one of the common people whose greatest political feat was beating New York's Thomas Dewey for the presidency in 1948.

Truman's certainty about things was steeped in a heavy reading in history and a horrendous sense of right and wrong and patriotism. Put together by Whitmore, this screen Truman is believable and in retrospect enviable in the ability to shape world events by the simple logic of an honest man.

Whitmore shows Truman as a courageous opponent of bigotry, hypocrisy of whatever kind and economic totalitarianism which shattered common people by intent.

Truman probably knew more cusswords than a Missouri mule skinner. And he used most of them in the White House.

But they seem innocent by the standards of this generation, anachronistic and honestly felt in the Truman era when right and wrong was more a matter of choice than accident. HST was of the generation which was convinced it could control events. And to incredible degree, he influenced them.

Whitmore plays it out to a standing ovation to the audience on the screen. Some of the scenes are so direct, yet somehow are reminiscences of historic confrontations subverted by the ambivalent Johnson and Nixon transition years.

Harry Truman punctuates his certainities with more than "gee whiz." He punches Richard Nixon and Douglas MacArthur and Joseph McCarthy right in their platitudes. Their greatest "sins," no doubt, were being Republican.

Whitmore makes sure you see how Harry sees a world he made complex. And this characterization implies that maybe, maybe a direct man one day in the future will unravel some perplexities and put Earth in control of some part of the universe. This ol' spaceship is going to need the HST touch.

Whitmore's Harry S. Truman saw enormous honor in public service. He was not for sale.

New Industry Moving Here

H. F. Butler Corp. of Union, New Jersey has announced plans to open a new industry in Cameron, and groundbreaking ceremonies were held Thursday at the 15-acre site in the Industrial Park.

Butler Weldments Corp. will be one of three company subsidiaries and the first to be built outside of New Jersey. It will serve a market in the south part of the United States.

The plant will manufacture welded steel foundations and casings for industrial machinery and will be using a 20-ton crane in the plant.

Wallace Butler, president of the parent company, and Robert Krueger, executive vice-president, were in Cameron Thursday to finalize plans for construction of a 12,000-square-foot steel building which will be located in the Industrial Park north of Walled Lake Door.

Butler said the new industry will employ 20 workers to start, with plans calling for a work force of around 50 persons in a year and a half. Butler said he expects the plant to grow rapidly over the first five years.

First visit to Cameron was made by company officials three years ago, when the Cameron Industrial Foundation and Texas Power & Light Co. worked together to bring in the new industry. Six other Texas cities were under consideration for the industry before decision was made to build in Cameron.

Butler told The Herald that the CIF "sold us on Cameron, and we feel people in Cameron are our kind of people. Our business was built on people and our promotions come from within the company."

Building for the plant will be financed locally through the CIF, First National Bank and Citizens National Bank, Chamber of Commerce officials said.

A general manager and two supervisors for the plant will move here from New Jersey and other workers will be employed locally, Butler said.

"We will be looking for welders and people with the ability to read and construct things from blueprints," he said. A training program for welders will be conducted by Texas State Technical Institute, when the plant goes into operation in October or November, CIF President Narvie Caperton said.

Butler complimented the Industrial Foundation for its assistance in presenting Cameron as a construction site, and to Frank Davis, TP&L industrial consultant, who showed officals a cross section of the state before final decision was made.

Contract for construction of the industry's building is expected to be awarded soon, with completion in about six months.

Museum Meeting Set

The executive committee and members of the committees of the Milam County Historical Museum will meet at 2 p.m. Tuesday, January 25 in the Museum for the purpose of organizing a membership drive and for setting a time for the formal opening of the Museum. All members are asked to attend this important meeting.

Jail Inmate Commits Suicide

Justice of the Peace Bill Hill ruled last Monday that 25-year-old Johnny Joe Laskowski, found dead in the Williamson County Jail in Georgetown, committee suicide by hanging himself. An autopsy report also stated that his wrists had been slashed. The rope for hanging had been fashioned of torn blanket strips. The inmate had been charged with posssesion of marijuana and peyote.

City Marshal Elusive

The city of Rosebud has been turned down, again, by a candiate for City Marshal. There have been something like four the council approved of, and two were actually told to start work by a certain date, but both chose otherwise. The first could not find suitable housing and the second submitted a letter stating that he had had heart surgery and could not begin work for ten weeks. Another candidate contacted last week also turned down the city.

More Stolen Checks Cashed

Gatesville police were notified that more stolen Croyell Memorial Hospital payroll checks have been cashed--the latest reports being issued by Stephenville authorities. Five checks totaling $799.51 were cashed at stores in Stephenville on Jan. 13 bringing the total number of checks cashed so far to 39. Some 200 blank payroll checks were stolen from the hospital recently.

Classrooms Due For High School

The Hearne school board awarded a contract to Sentry Construction Co. of Bryan for new construction of the high school campus. The construction calls for four new regular classrooms, one science room and a counselor's office. Low bid was $174,403.

Civilian Job Cut Ordered

A total of 367 civiliam employes at Fort Hood will lose their jobs by Sept. 30, 1978, under a reduction ordered by the Department of the Army, Fort Hood officials announced Thursday. Much of the reduction will be accomplished by normal attrition, by employes retiring or otherwise leaving their jobs, officials said. However, a "restricted hiring procedure" has begun, to help the reduction. Hiring will be permitted only to fill critically essential positions.

Second Bus Provided For Senior Citizens

Another bus for senior citizens' use will enable both north and south Milam to provide better transportation services to the aging, according to County Judge O. B. Harden.

The second bus was provided by the Hill Country Community Action Assocation and will be used in the Cameron area. The bus that was formerly used for county-wide transportation will be stationed at Rockdale and will serve the area south of the Little River.

The Cameron bus is headquartered at the Cameron Community Center and information may be obtained by calling 697-2511. It will serve Cameron, Buckholts, and the rural areas north of the river.

The other bus will be kept at the Senior Citizens Center in Rockdale at 215 W. Bell. Coordinator Denise Doss may be reached by calling 446-2666. That bus will serve Rockdale, Milano, Gause, Thorndale, and those rural areas.-

St. Monica Priest Is Named Monsignor

Rev. John Geiser of St. Monica's Catholic Church in Cameron has been named monsignor by appointment of Pope Paul VI.

The appointment was made Dec. 26; however, the papal documents did not reach the Austin Diocese of the Catholic Church until Monday.

Monsignor Geiser, who has been in Cameron for almost 18 years, was ordained in 1930 in Galveston. This January he is beginning his 47th year as a priest.

Born in Burlington, he has served as assistant and pastor of Port Arthur, Lott, Freeport, Plantersville, and Tours.

Two Waco priests were also appointed.

The new monsignors are honorary or domestic prelates in the Roman Catholic Church. They are so called because they were at one time principal prelates of the papal household. They acted as intermediaries between the pope and the cardinals.

In current usage the title is restricted to those prelates, real and honorary, below the rank of prothonotary. Their appointment is by papal brief and is intended for life.

The prelates do not act as assistants at the espiscopal throne. They are entitled to use the bugia at mass and solemn vespers, and are addressed as right reverend monsignor.

Sugg To Head Plant Expansion

Robert R. (Bob) Sugg Jr., production manager at Aluminum Company of America's Rockdale Works, has been named project manage for Alcoa's portion of the local power plant expansion and accelerated lignite mining program, according to works manager Duncan D. McGregor.

John W. Havins, aluminum plant superintendent at Alcoa's Massena (N.Y.) Operations, will transfer to Rockdale to become production manager.

Mann Retires After 30 Years With Soil Service

Wayne Mann, district conservationist with the Soil Conservation Service in Cameron, has retired after more than 30 years of service.

Wayne and his wife, Vivian, have lived in Cameron for 23 years and plan to remain in Cameron after his retirement.

Mann was honored with a retirement supper in Temple on January 14. Bill Marek, district conservationist from Marlin, was Master of Ceremonies for the event and Adrian Moore, district convservationist from Taylor, was the after-dinner speaker.

'THE CANTERVILLE GHOST' in rehearsal here by seniors, will be presented 7:30 p.m. Wednesay and Thursday. A chili supper will precede the play on Thursday, with serving starting at 5:30. Tickets for the play and supper are on sale by senior class members.

Beyond Rhetoric...

Even as Hubert Humphrey consoled outgoing President Gerald Ford, the first Southern President in 125 years took the oath of office, going from "Jimmy Who?" to Mr. President in two years.

Deputy Senate Majority Leader Humphrey told Ford he would have given 10 years of his life to have just 10 days as president. Humphrey was vice-president under Lyndon Johnson for a term and unsuccessful Democratic candidate in 1968 against Richard Nixon.

Citizen Ford is moving to Palm Springs, Calif., after the narrow win by Carter, amalgamating votes in Texas, the reconstituted "Solid South," and New York. Approximately half the country, west of the Mississippi River, supported Ford.

Carter acknowledged Ford's efforts to "heal our land." It was a departure from the debate rhetoric of charging Ford had not done a "single thing" to lead the country.

Theme of the inaugural address was unity.

"Let us create together a new national spirit of unity and trust. Let us learn together and laugh together and pray together, confident that in the end we will triumph together in the right."

It was the beginning of an era beyond the transition "guns and butter," "war and peace" of the Johnson and Nixon-Ford years. Humphrey had been finessed by early Carter primary wins to assure Carter at least a place on the Democratic ticket and finally the unchallenged top spot.

Not since Kennedy's "New Frontier" inauguration in January, 1961, has the nation been able to anticipate something new in federal government.

Without mandate, President Carter must cajole change in size and measure of government through more "inside" cabinet appointments than either Nixon or Johnson. A recalcitrant Democratic Congress also has new leadership and a mind of its own.

Mr. Carter will be attempting to heal and streamline an apparatus and national fissures beyond rhetoric. We wish him well.

Which Is True...

We welcome the Butler Company to Cameron.

This New Jersey concern is confirming its confidence in this Milam County seat and Texas by putting in a plant considered for Cameron Industrial Park at least two years ago.

The competence of CIF, Inc., the confidence of Cameron financial counsel, and the assistance of TP&L in bringing together the elements of the private sector with SBA in the public sector once again shows the unique quality of modern cooperation.

It is like welcoming friends who have finally decided Cameron and Milam County are a good place to build their future.

Which, indeed, is true.

"Low Down" FROM THE Congressional Record

By JOE CRUMP

(A Column for Readers Who Haven't Time to Review the Congressional Record Daily)

ENERGY STAMP PROGRAM ON TRIAL

Rep. Charles W. Whalen Jr. (Ohio) ". . .I would like to bring to our colleagues attention an interesting and innovative income-extension program that is being demonstrated in my district.

"The local Community Action Agency in Lorian County, Ohio, has. . .been sponsoring an experimental "energy stamp" program, to assist low-income persons in meeting their home heating bills.

"This energy stamp project is. . .one of only two such experiments in the country. . . The pilot project in Lorian County is now funded by the Federal Community Service emergency energy conservation program. CSA's authority for such a program is not widely known, but it does provide for innovative transfer payment programs of this type. . .

"The energy stamps which resemble and are used like travelers checks, are purchased on a 3-to-1 ration so that an eligible participant can purchase $75 worth of energy stamps for $25 cash.

"Applicants must prove their eligibility on two specific counts--their very low income, plus high natural gas heating bills. Specifically, they must demonstrate that their income does not exceed the limits set by CSA--$5-500 annual income for a family of four.

"The applicant is also required to provide documents relating to their own difficulties in paying their utility bill. In this instance, the agency will accept a shutoff notice or an extraordinary late bill indicating that a shutoff notice is imminent. . .

"As should be expected, the majority of the applicants are elderly citizens who must live on small, fixed income. In fact, studies show that senior citizens in many of our Northern States are compelled to allocate as much as one-third of their monthly social security payments to the cost of home heating in the winter.

"Of course, the basic concept, even the title of an energy stamp program, may lead to questions about the proper place of such a program within the Federal Government framework. This experiment in Lorian County, Ohio, should provide us with a lot of practical information that will be useful in evaluating the concept."

CRUMP'S GRASS ROOTS COMMENT

If the energy stamp program is adopted by the Federal Government, the food stamp fiasco should provide ample evidence that strict controls are in order.

Moral Choices

The Dilemmas Of Sex

By Jean Lipman-Blumen

Editor's Note: This is the second of 16 articles in the series: "Moral Choices in Contemporary Society." In this article, Dr. Jean Lipman-Blumen, a sociologist who has published extensively on sex roles and problems relating to women in our society, discusses the issues of responsibility and intimacy that underlie our current dilemmas about sex. These articles, which explore the controversial moral dilemmas that perplex Americans today, were written for Courses by Newspaper, a program developed by University Extension, University of California, San Diego, and funded by a grant from the national Endowment for the Humanities.

Most 20th Century analysts forget that they are not the inventors of the moral dilemmas surrounding sexuality. The issues of morality that infuse sexual behavior have always been with us.

Technology and changing values merely create the illusion that the current crop of problems is new and different.

Mass media's obsession with details of pre-, post-, extra-, intra-, and inter-marital sex, in pairs, trios, small groups or large crowds, falsely emphasizes their diversity and obscures their commonality. We lose sight of the important understanding that all forms of sexual behavior are linked by the same underlying moral issue: the relationship between intimacy and responsibility.

When procreation was seen as the essential rationale for sexual relationships, the responsibility bred by intimacy was apparent. With advanced medical technology and forms of birth control, the nonprocreative aspects of sex have become the major and often disproportionate focus of concern. Our interest is more readily titillated by details of the latest fads in sexual behavior than by the "heavy" subject of responsibility. But the question of responsiblity and intimacy barks at our heels.

While technological change has reduced some previous difficulties involved in human relationships, it has substituted others. The telephone, the automobile, the plane, and improved contraception create the possibility to meet, communicate, and develop seemingly intimate relationships with a speed and frequency previously impossible.

Mass media, another outgrowth of technology, provide the knowledge, examples, and value context within which relationships grow. The incubation period for intimacy thus has decreased drastically, and often we find ourselves catapulted into seemingly intimate relationships before we are "ready."

SEPARATENESS AND UNION

In one sense, we are never quite "ready" for intimacy. The human condition is one of polarity between essential separateness or uniqueness and union or communion with others. Because we are never totally "ready" for intimacy--never totally prepared to relinquish our separateness--the question of responsibility looms large.

Sexual union expresses the duality of human separateness and connectedness. It represents striving after confirmation of our uniqueness as an individual, at the same time that it reaffirms our loss of self in a larger cosmic process. This is true with regard both to the immediate sexual act with our partners and to the new life that may result from such a union.

Sexual relationships, the physical epitome of intimacy, inevitably breed responsibility, whether or not we choose to recognize it. Sexuality creates responsibility because our sense of ourselves as sexual beings --particularly sexually acceptable, attractive, and adequate beings--is central to our human identity. And it is the exposure of our essential being, our core meaning, that creates responsibplity in ourselves and in the individuals who would accept our offer of intimacy.

Sexual relationships involve exposing our most vulnerable selves to one another. Protecting the other person's vulnerable self from harm, humiliation, rejection, and embarrassment is a serious responsibility. The degree to which we do this is one measure of our own humanity.

While we may be mature in years, sexual maturity is a long complicated process not systematically linked to physiological and chronological development. In fact, in modern societies, the individual's sexual self is the least and last explicitly developed dimension of self.

Unlike the social and intellectual dimensions of the self, which are involved in human interaction and growth from the day of birth, the sexual self in modern society usually is protected from deliberate and conscious development and experience at least until adolescence. Perhaps our awareness of the disparity between the childlike state of our sexual being and experience and the sophistication of our intellectual, social, even political selves complicates the problem.

VULNERABILITY

Novelists from F. Scott Fitzgerald to J. D. Salinger have portrayed the anxiety of the young man's first sexual encounter. It is a picture that arouses sympathy, horror, and humor, because we recognize his "brand newness," his raw vulnerability. It is this very vulnerability--both in women and men-that creates responsibility.

Often, we are so concerned with self-protection that we fail to recognize the other person's equally great need. Opening oneself to another person, revealing an aspect of oneself that is at the center of one's identity, is an act fraught with both danger and great potential. There is the danger of being diminished by rejection, the potential of being enhanced by confirmation and union. The possibility of self-reduction by treating others without responsibility adds still another level of intricacy to sexual relationships.

The responsibility we assume for both the other person and ourselves can act as a heavy burden or as a source of great joy, growth, and awareness, depending in part on the motivation behind sexual relationships. The feminists have been quick to see that the moral issue at the heart of sexual intimacy is not "if" but "why" we establish sexual relationships.

MOTIVES FOR SEXUAL RELATIONSHIPS

Do we seek sexual relationships simply because we perceive the person as a "sex object," someone who "turns us on?" Does the relationship mean the creation of "convenience sex," not unrelated to "convenience foods" in an increasingly plastic society? Does the relationship signify a conquest, a power or ego "trip?"

Do we enter sexual relationships because refusing may label us as unsophisticated, unliberated, repressed, unmanly, unwomanly? Or do we engage in sexual relationships because we fear refusal will jeopardize other valued aspects of the relationship? Do we do so because we sense that denial will damage the other person's sense of self?

Do we enter such relationships to transform ourselves and others? Do we seek sexual union to create new life or instill vitality in old lives? Do we enter sexual relationships in order to give or to take or to establish a balance between the two?

Very often the emotional and intellectual intimacy that we seek with another person is absent, and we attempt to create it artificially through sexual intimacy. But when sexual intimacy stands alone, unintegrated with the development of knowing, caring and feeling, we face the "depersonalization," the anonymity of sex.

SEX OBJECT

The new "buzzwords"--"depersonalization" and "sex object"--bespeak our concern with protecting our sense of self. When our sexual identity is reduced to sexual functioning, replaceable bodily parts, we experience the anomie, the existential isolation that transforms sexual relationships into a parody of human existence.

Only the responsibility that we take for protecting one another's unique individuality and self in sexual relationahips insules us against the tragic realization that our most central self is simply "another body," not a special unique being to another person.

Trust is an important component of responsibility. When we enter sexual relationships before we have exposed the nonsexual aspects of ourselves, it is impossible to guarantee responsibility for protecting this unknown, unique individuality of another person. And when one individual cannot hold out the promise of responsibility, the other individual cannot hold out the expectation of trust.

Yet, getting to know another person takes time. Marathon self-revelation is no substitute for seeing an individual's personality reveal itself under different circumstances over time. When we telescope the interpersonal aspect of knowing another person and enter a sexual relationship on the basis of "instant understanding," we cannot guarantee that we will truly like, respect, and be responsible for this individual whom we shall know differently as time passes. The disjuncture between the physical intimacy and the interpersonal anonymity takes its toll in loneliness and despair.

The relationship between responsibility and intimacy is obviously very complex. The complexity arises from the interweaving of reponsibility, trust, and intimacy, unique ness and commonality, isolation and communion, self and other. The moral dilemmas posed by this relationship cannot be reduced or understood by separating the inseparable parts.

Why is Texas Power & Light asking for a rate increase?

On December 22, 1976, Texas Power & Light Company applied to all incorporated cities and towns it serves and to the Public Utility Commission of Texas for authority to increase its rates for electric service.

The rate schedules will result in a 34 percent increase in the average rates charged. However, due to greater customer conservation, the rate changes are expected to increase the adjusted gross revenue of Texas Power & Light Company by 27 percent.

In coming weeks, our application will be under consideration by the cities and towns served by the Company and by the Public Utility Commission.

Texas Power & Light wants you to know why we are asking for this rate increase.

1 TP&L MUST CHANGE THE FUELS NEEDED TO PRODUCE ELECTRICITY

FROM NATURAL GAS . . .

1. The State of Texas requires a phase-out of the use of natural gas for generation of electricity.
2. Gas supplies are limited.
3. Rising cost of gas: Our average cost in 1974, $.48 per million BTU's in 1975, $.89 per million BTU's in 1976, $1.21 per million BTU's New supplies cost $2.00 per million BTU's.

. . .TO LIGNITE AND NUCLEAR POWER

1. A large supply of lignite is available in Texas.
2. Lignite is cheaper. Average cost in 1976 was $.27 per million BTU's.
3. The use of lignite instead of gas saved our customers $80 million in one year.
4. The future also favors nuclear power as a cheaper means of producing electricity. First nuclear unit in 1981.

2 TP&L MUST BUILD MORE ELECTRICITY PRODUCING PLANTS

1. Our customers are increasing at the rate of over 20,000 per year, and . . .
2. The demand for electricity will double in 10 years.
3. Plants using high-priced natural gas must be phased out, held for peak-use periods, or rebuilt to use coal.

3 THE COSTS OF NEW PLANTS ARE INCREASING

1. Today, lignite plants cost 3 times as much as gas-fueled plants: in 1972, $135 per kilowatt in 1975-80, $275 per kilowatt* in 1980-85, $450 per kilowatt*
2. Nuclear plants cost 6 times as much as gas-fueled plants: in 1981-83, $600 per kilowatt*
3. Our construction costs have increased from $64 million in 1968, to $269 million in 1976, to $299 million in 1977*

*estimated

4 TP&L MUST INSTALL COSTLY POLLUTION-CONTROL DEVICES

1. Government regulations now require pollution-control devices that cost millions of dollars.
2. On a new plant in 1972, anti-pollution devices cost $2.50 per kilowatt. Today, these costs have jumped to $62.00 per kilowatt.
3. On four units now under construction, cost of anti-pollution devices will be $186,000,000.
4. Anti-pollution devices increase generating costs 15 to 20%.

5 TP&L MUST STAY FINANCIALLY STRONG IF WE ARE TO PROVIDE FOR THE FUTURE, BUT . . .

1. Interest coverage (earnings available to pay interest) is down from 6 times in 1968 to 3 times in 1976.
2. Average interest cost is up from 4.3% in 1968 to 7.6% in 1976.
3. Rate of return on investment is not adequate.

TP&L'S PRESENT RATES WILL NOT SUPPORT . . .

- COSTS TO MEET INCREASING CUSTOMER DEMAND FOR ELECTRICITY
- CONSTRUCTION COSTS NECESSARY TO CHANGE FUELS USED TO PRODUCE ELECTRICITY
- AN ADEQUATE RETURN ON INVESTMENT, NOR A RETURN NECESSARY TO ATTRACT NEW INVESTMENT DOLLARS

Methodist Conference Sees Gains

The largest of six United Methodist Annual Conferences in Texas has reported a turnaround in membership loss with a net gain of 2590 members in 1976 and an increase of giving to all causes by nearly 10 percent with receipts totaling $30,224,768.

The Texas Conference Council on Ministries, in session at Lakeview Methodist Assembly near Palestine earlier this month, was told giving to one missionary fund, Advance Specials, had increased by $70,000 reflecting a 33 percent growth in one year.

A "Blue Ribbon" evangelism committee made a progress report on plans to increase the membership of the 784 local churches in the annual conference by as much as 10,000 in the next year. Final approval for the evangelism program is expected to come at the session of the annual conference scheduled for Houston, May 30-June 2.

The conference now has nearly one quarter million members in a 57-county area in East Texas.

Bishop Fqnis A. Crutchfield, resident bishop of the Houston Area, said he was pleased to see the projected evangelism program called for each local church setting their own goals for growth.

PIPELINE OIL LEAK BURNED--Workers from the Amdel Pipeline Company watch as thousands of gallons of oil were burned near Rosebud Saturday. A leak in the line was discovered and instead of bringing in trucks to haul and reclaim the oil, it had to be burned off to keep it from contaminating a nearby lake. Trucks could not get to the spot because of rain-wet soil. The incident happened on the old Sneed Ranch west of Rosebud. Smoke from the fire could be seen for miles, and the smell of burning oil hung over the territory for three days. Rosebud News Photo.

Management Areas Operated By TP&W

AUSTIN

Texans who haven't had an opportunity to hunt quail still can , and it will cost them only $1 per day.

For that price hunters from the Panhandle to South Texas can participate in weekend hunts on four of the wildlife management areas operated by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

For South Texas quail hunters, the Chaparral area in Dimmit and LaSalle Counties can prove ideal. The 15,200-acre facility contains a quantity of quail, with no restrictions on the number of daily hunters. Persons wishing to hunt at Chaparral, located eight miles west of Artesia Wells on State Highway 133, can do so on Jan. 15-16, 29-30; Feb. 5-6, 12-13, 26-27.

Upper Panhandle area hunters can hunt quail at the Gene Howe Area, six miles east of Canadian in Hemphill County, on Jan. 22-23, Feb. 5-6, and March 5-6. At the Howe Area, only 30 hunters per day will be allowed on the facility, with a 12-bird bag limit.

In the lower Panhandle, the Matador Area, 11 miles north of Paducah in Cottle County, will be open to quail hunters Jan. 15-16, 22-23; Feb. 5-6, 12-13, 19-20. There is no restriction on the number of daily hunters allowed on the 28,183-acre area, but bag limit will remain 12 per day, with $1 fee.

East Texans also have the opportunity to participate in a public hunt at the Pat Mayse Area, 11 miles northwest of Paris in Lamar County. There is no fee, nor restriction on the number of hunters who can hunt on the area, located on the west end of Pat Mayse Reservoir. Quail hunting there began Dec. 1,1976 and runs through Feb. 13, 1977.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department holds these public hunts not only to permit hunters to take surplus game populations but also to determine how the harvest is affected by research management practices, specially quail habitat studies.

U.S. Fisheries To Protect Whales

It wasn't planned that way, but the United States' 200-mile fisheries limit will help protect whales.

The limit that goes into effect in March is intended to prevent overfishing off North American coasts. It also will create an area of some 200 million square miles where whaling will be restricted.

The United States stopped catching whales five years ago and banned imports of whale products. As a member of the International Whaling Commission, the United States has lobbied unsuccessfully for a 10-year moratorium on all whaling.

Partly through U.S. efforts, the 16-nation commission last June lowered the annual catch limit on whales to 27-939, a reduction of 6,000.

Enforcement Difficulties

But as William Graves points out in the December National Geographic, the quotas are largely unenforceable. Graves attended the talks in London as did Craig Van Note, a congressional assistant ho was present as an observer.

"There are other ways of making the quota stick," Van Note told the writer. "Under federal law the United States can prohibit seafood imports from any country that hinders international fishery conservation programs, and the American market is too big to lose."

Prey Becoming Scarce

The cutback reflects international pressure, reductions in assigned annual quotas, and the fact that whales are scarce and harder to find. Although whaling has declined, the total ban urged by the United States appears years away.

"Japan's situation is unique," harpooner Kimio Watanabe told Graves. "We are the only country that consumes sizable quantities of whale meat--it is even part of our school-lunch program for children."

"We have no large domestic supply of protein such as your American beef cattle," he explained, "for we simply cannot spare the land to raise them. We depend on protein on what we harves t from the sea, and for centuries that has included whales."

Not Serious Threat

"I think that both your Alaskan Eskimo and the Japanese coastal whaler are justified, said Dr. Kawamura a leading Japanese cetologist. "The people of Ayukawa, for example, depend heavily on whales for their livlihood. In my opinion, neither they nor the Eskimos seriously affect the world's stock of whales."

Dr. Kawamura relies upon Japan's whaling industry for the specimens and the financial support he needs for his studies of the big mammals, and Graves reminded him that an end to large-scale whaling might cost him his job.

"I would be out of work, wouldn't I?" the scientist agreed cheerfully. "But I believe we should replace pelagic whaling with pelagic research, and perhaps operate an international scientific fleet to gather knowledge for all mankind. I would gladly join such a project."

"In the past," Dr. Kawamura concluded, "whales have too often divided us. I believe that anything so wondrous should bring us together."

WHALE populations plummeted as a result of large-scale whaling. Most authorities feel current hunting quotas do not threaten to wipe out any species of the great whales, but their estimates are nebulous. Some conservationists think that biologist Victor B. Scheffer's figures may be too optimistic. The 1976-77 quotas shown for sperm whales do not include 685 of either sex that may be taken in the North Atlantic.

Enrollment Up At Jr. College

In a report to the TJC Board of Trustees, Dr. Felder said the spring enrollment is now 1708, within three students of last spring's total, with late registration scheduled through Jan. 25.

"We are now predicting that our spring enrollment will exceed last fall's," he said, noting that the spring figures are traditionally lower than the fall semester. "A lot of people are choosing TJC and we're glad to have them."

Dr. Felder also pointed out that about one-fourth of all TJC students are receiving financial aid through government or private sources. This year $280,000 will flow into students' hands through the college financial aid office. "It's a significant point that we're spending that much money and affecting that many students," he said.

In other business, the trustees heard a report on campus improvement projects which include installation of air conditioning equipment in the East Gym, minor interior remodeling of the Fine Arts Building and re-keying of all campus buildings. College officials also are planning to replace the maintenance building with a new structure which will include space for storage of equipment, warehouse space, and a small office area.

Trustees approved an application for federal grant request of $30,000 for purchase of instructional equipment. If the grant is approved, the college would match the funds.

In discussing the energy shortage, Dr. Felder told the Board that TJC was able to remain open during the recent natural gas cutbacks to some schools and industries because it is on a high priority list with Lone Star Gas Co.

NEW JET FOR COAST GUARD will replace aircraft that have been in service over 20 years. The new craft will be able to detect oil spills, and will be used in the Coast Guard's search and rescue program.

Jet Aircraft Due For Coast Guard

The U. S. Coast Guard has announced that Falcon Jet Corporation of Tetterboro, New Jersey has been awarded a multi-million dollar contract to construct 41 new medium range search aircraft.

The contract totals $204-846,291 and includes the construction and documentation of the aircraft, crew training, and a computerized maintenance system.

The new fan jet aircraft will replace the aging fleet of Grumman HU16E "Albatross" twin-engined aircraft, many of which have been in Coast Guard service for over 20 years.

The Coast Guard is now using the Grumman HU16E's at Air Stations in San Francisco, Calif.; Corpus Christi, Tex.; Mobile, Ala.; Miami, Flo.; Cape Codd, Mass.; and Traverse City, Mich.

The primary duties of the new Falcon fan jet aircraft will be search and rescue, marine environmental protection through pollution surveillance, and law enforcement patrols of U. S. territorial waters and the new 200-mile Fisheries Conservation Zone.

All of the new aircraft will be capable of carrying infrared and ultraviolet sensor systems

Texas Taxpayers Share Of Federal Budget Told

Texas taxpayers will be required to pay out approximately $24,156,000,000 in Federal taxes as their share of the cost of the Federal spending budget of $440 billion proposed by President Ford for the 1978 Federal fiscal year beginning October 1, 1977, according to an estimate today by the Texas State Chamber of Commerce, which is comprised of the four regional chambers in Texas.

This estimate was based on the State Chamber's calculations that Texas taxpayers bear 5.49 percent of all Federal taxes.

The State Chamber pointed out that any changes which Congress may make in this budget will reduce or increase the amount that Texas taxpayers will have to bear depending on whether Congress cuts or spends more.

In commenting on this report, Alf Jernigan, executive vice-president of the East Texas Chamber of Commerce, pointed out that the taxpayers in the 71 counties comprising the East Texas region of Texas will bear nearly $13 billion dollars of this cost since over 50% of the state's population is in the East Texas Chamber area.

Jernigan further stated that these figures will be subject to change depending on the recommendations and programs of President Carter and, of course, more importantly the action of Congress.

Indications point to a more generous Congress this session, especially in the job creation legislation and and other public works type of legislation.

Jernigan concluded by stating that one of our most important tasks will be to keep a close eye on trends in Congress and make every effort to encourage economy in government whenever possible.

Santa Fe Income Up

Net income of Santa Fe Industries, Inc. for 1976 was $120.5 million, or $4.61 a share, compared with $109.2 million, or $4.23 a share earned in 1975, John S. Reed, chairman, announced today.

Fourth quarter net income was $35.1 million, or $1.34 a share, compared with $33,1 million, or $1.28 a share a year earlier.

Winning Ways With Wine

Make Meals More Marvelous

You can improve the flavor of almost any food by adding one ingredient: cooking wine.

Cooking wine can tenderize meat, give food a fine aroma, and add rich flavor and body to everything from appetizers to desserts without adding any alcohol impact.

ONE STEP to better meals is to add a little wine.

If you're on a picnic check to see that there is sufficient ice left in the cooler to keep leftovers safe and cool till you get home.

SOCIETY AND CLUBS

Civic Garden Club

Mrs. Leo Fuchs was hostess at her home for the Civic Garden Club as members met on Thursday morning, Jan. 20 for their January meeting.

A social hour preceded the meeting during which time refreshments were served.

In observance of Arbor Day, the third Friday in January, the program was based on "Trees in the Landscape," a program of kodachrome slides with commentary prepared by the Texas Landscape Design Council in conjunction with Texas A&M University.

This collection of slides was awarded a National Council of State Garden Clubs, Inc. award in 1976.

Mrs. Fuchs is a member of the Texas Landscape Critics group and a former president of the council.

Mrs. Evelyn Hearne gave the commentary on the slides program for the local group.

Mrs. Theo Aschenbeck, president, presided for a short business session at which time the following officers were elected by acclamation for the 1977-78 year:

Mrs. Leo Fuchs, president; Mrs. Evelyn Hearne, vice-president; Mrs. M. H. Wimberly, recording secretary; Mrs. Eunice Lawrence, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Jack Bingham, treasurer; Mrs. Theo Aschenbeck, parliamentarian; Mrs. W. M. Fanning, historian; and Mrs. B. D. Clark, time keeper.

Mrs. M. H. Wimberly will be hostess at her home in Milano for the February meeting of the club. Mrs. Jack Bigham will present the program on "Bromeliads."

CLUBS

Business-Professional

The Cameron Business and Professional Women's Club met Monday, Jan. 17.

They were honord with a guest speaker from Copperas Cove who is the director of District 6 and founder of her local club. She is Lea Ledger, and she holds a BA and MA degree, is owner and operator of a ladiesready-to-wear shop in Copperas Cove and holds too many homors to mention.

Lea brought Puna Kaaialii, a member of her own club and an associate with the airlines in Copperas Cove. Puna is originally from Hawaii.

Lea told of their organization of the Business and Professional Women's Club, and said Cameron's was the largest in the United States and the only one with a club house.

Mental Health and Mental Retardation, as well as neglected children, were explained by Ms. Ledger.

Other topics discussed were "why you joined?", "when you joined?" and "who could not vote when you joined?"

Mrs. Mazie Price and Mrs. Lillian Lester were guests at the meeting.

A covered dish luncheon was served.

Delpian Club

Co-hostesses were Mrs. Caroll Green and Mrs. Leland Green Sr.

Mrs. Bowling called the meeting to order and asked Mrs. Leland Green to lead in the reading of the American Creed.

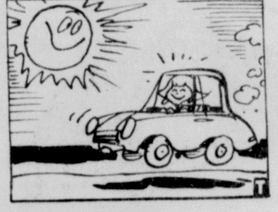
Guest speaker was Frank M. Luecke, editor-publisher of The Cameron Herald. The topic was "Consumer Rights."

At the conclusion of the program 20 members were served refreshments in the dining room.

Assisting the hostesses were Mrs. Vivian McCullin and Mrs. Bowling.

Energy Saving Tips

You can increase your car fuel economy by 10 to 20 percent if you keep your cool, without resorting to your car air conditioner. Opening all the windows will probably provide you with a sufficient breeze.



Girl Scouts To Sell Cookies

Local Girl Scout Troops 169 and 403, with Mrs. Bill Kelm and Mrs. Derwood Cobb leaders, respectively, will be selling cookies door-to-door beginning January 28 at 4 p.m. The regular sale ends February 1 and the clean-up begins Feb. 15 and ends on Feb. 21.

This year chocolate chip, lemon creme, chocolate and vanilla creme, Scot-tea, mint, and Savannah (peanut butter) cookies and cheddarette crackers will be available. They will each sell for $1.25 per package.

By participating in the annual happening, girls will make a substantial contribution to the overall Girl Scouts program.

Money-Saving Ideas

It is possible, even in these times, to stretch your budget without skimping on the things you want.

For example, save scraps from making or altering clothes and wash these scraps along with the clothes they match, so that the scraps and clothes will "age" alike. Then patch away. The patches will hardly show.
